Abstract: EDS and Cisco have a long history of working together to deliver innovation to our mutual clients. It was in this spirit that we became a member of the EDS Agility Alliance. Today, together as part of the EDS Agility Alliance partnership, we are delivering more value, to more clients, faster than we have ever done before. This year, Cisco and the EDS Agility Alliance will continue our drive to design and bring to market new offers with our joint vision of the data center and virtualization to accelerate our clients realization of value. John Chambers – Chairman and CEO of Cisco Systems.

John Chambers: Hello. My name is John Chambers, Chairman and CEO of Cisco Systems. And, it's an honor to be one of the trusted partners with EDS.

John Chambers: We've worked together for over 15 years bringing technology to life in our customer environments to look at how you use innovation to achieve the goals of our mutual clients. Whether it's one of the largest global MPR service networks in the world or deploying and managing many of the most advanced networks for our customers, we have an ability to work together.

John Chambers: We are one of the original members of the EDS Agility Alliance. It brings to life new concepts to our joint customers. It allows us to understand what the network can be in terms of the platform for communications and IT, enabling the power of the data center and virtualization of information technology.

John Chambers: We also share a common view in terms of corporate social responsibility. And together, we have the opportunity bring value to our clients.

John Chambers: We're very proud of the alliance, EDS and Cisco together.
